INTRODUCTION

Interpreto conducted a psychometric evaluation of the candidate referred by the client organization. Following the administration of several scientifically validated psychometric tests, we analyzed the traits that characterize their functioning, their strengths and possible improvements in order to facilitate selection decisions for the position being evaluated.

The data collected through psychometric tests was interpreted by Interpreto's analysis system. This system was developed by the Interpreto professionals who are members in good standing of the Ordre des Psychologues du Québec or the Ordre des Conseillers et Conseillères d'Orientation du Québec.

This report provides you with:

- An indication of the potential of the person evaluated to demonstrate certain competencies necessary to be successful in the position being evaluated.
- An adequacy rating between the results obtained by the person evaluated and the requirements for the position being evaluated.
- Suggestions for probing questions and advice on integration into a new position.

USING THE REPORT

- This document is confidential. Only those involved in the selection process are authorized to consult it.
- This automated evaluation report may not be used for any purpose other than to make a selection decision in accordance with the consent form signed by the applicant. This report has therefore been designed specifically in relation to the success criteria of the targeted position.
- As a matter of professional ethics, we suggest that you do not make copies of this document.
- Since human beings are constantly evolving, the content of this automated evaluation report is considered valid for a period of two years.

CONDITIONS OF SUCCESS

To encourage the professional development of the person being evaluated, we recommend that you provide feedback on the results of the evaluation. This practice could have an engaging impact on the candidate, facilitating their integration into the position and helping them to make better use of talents to the service of your organization.

PERSONALITY

The traits and facets of personality allow us to evaluate the foundations of a person's psychological functioning, while providing us with information on their motivational and behavioral aspects. The following descriptions are based solely on the trends observed in terms of personality and do not take into account the interactions between the various traits on the one hand, nor the interactions with cognitive abilities such as learning, reasoning and analytical skills on the other. The additional information provided is therefore very general and should be used with caution.

OPEN-MINDEDNESS

▶ This person shows a balanced interest between new ideas and simple, well-defined approaches. They enjoy juggling different points of view when these are linked to concrete applications. They seem more at ease with abstract concepts when they meet practical needs or provide tangible value. They take a measured approach to innovation, showing moderate interest in exploring complex solutions or broadening their horizons. They demonstrate a reasonable openness to new ideas, working methods and divergent perspectives, while remaining grounded in pragmatic and achievable approaches.

This person strikes a balance between pragmatism and imagination. They can be attentive to their inner world and feelings, although this is not central to their functioning. They favor concrete approaches, but are capable of integrating a touch of creativity or intuition when appropriate. In their decisions, they know how to combine factual data with a certain sensitivity to personal impressions, thus adapting to the demands of the situations they encounter.

APPROACH TO WORK

▶ This person is average when it comes to ambition, competitiveness, achievement orientation, perseverance and self-discipline. They show a good level of commitment to the tasks they undertake and generally do what it takes to complete them, although they can sometimes become distracted or discouraged when faced with significant difficulties. They are capable of taking responsibility and handling tasks independently. Their sense of self-efficacy is average.

This person stands out for their reliability and degree of organization. They place great importance on respecting their commitments and rigorously following rules and protocols. Planning is very important to them. They have a great eye for detail and are very meticulous. When it comes to decision-making, they take the time to study the situation and consider the various options before making their choice. They are uncomfortable with uncertainty. They are reliable, organized, methodical and far-sighted.

RELATIONAL QUALITY

This person is altruistic and caring. They are warm, respectful and attentive to the needs of others. They are sensitive to the emotions and difficulties of the people around them, and are easy to trust, believing that most people are well-intentioned. In their decisions, they consider the impact on others and actively seek to preserve or improve interpersonal relationships. In the workplace, they help create an atmosphere where everyone feels accepted and valued.

This person favors social cohesion and avoids confrontation whenever possible. They prefer to keep quiet or rephrase their words to avoid offending others or creating tension. They forgive easily and are modest, not seeking to put themselves forward or consider themselves superior to others. Polite and respectful of authority, they favor a collaborative approach to relationships. When it comes to decision-making, they often prefer to consult others before making important decisions.

INTERPERSONAL PROPENSITY

This person has very high levels of leadership and assertiveness. They seek to influence and convince. In social situations, they express their opinions without hesitation and assert themselves naturally. This is a person of action, motivated by taking on projects and responsibilities from a position of authority. Their great sense of initiative and natural ascendancy enables them to mobilize others and actively involve them in their projects. They are often described as having a strong personality and distinguishing themselves as a leader.

This person is sociable, friendly and enjoys social interaction. They enjoy meeting new people and feel comfortable making connections. Their enthusiasm and optimism are often perceptible, helping to create a positive atmosphere around them. They are generally energetic and integrate easily into teamwork contexts, where they can pass on their dynamism to others.

EMOTIONAL MANAGEMENT

This person has a low propensity for negative emotions such as anger or frustration, and effectively manages those that do arise. They are generally calm, stable-tempered and thoughtful in their emotional reactions. Not easily irritated, they take criticism in stride. In emergency or high-pressure situations, they remain calm and in control of their emotions. Their ability to react calmly and thoughtfully makes them reliable in demanding environments.

This person is self-assured and rarely doubts their abilities. They approach challenges with confidence and demonstrate a high degree of autonomy in their decisions. Even in the face of complex situations, they maintain an optimistic frame of mind and an ability to bounce back from setbacks. Socially, they are at ease in their interactions and are not easily swayed by the judgment of others, enabling them to move confidently in a variety of contexts.

PROBING QUESTIONS

In this section, you will find examples of questions to ask in an interview with the candidate or to use as inspiration when taking references for competencies and skills that came out as Weak or In Progress in relation to the assessment.

If all skills meet expectations, no specific questions appear in this section. However, it may still be interesting to ask the candidate during a subsequent interview about their sources of motivation at work with a view to job integration. Finally, taking references can also be useful in order to confirm observations and provide concrete examples of behaviours related to the most crucial skills in the position to be filled.

LEARNING SKILLS

Using a recent example, explain how you usually proceed to quickly learn new ways of doing things.

Tell me about the most difficult task you recently had to learn at work.

TASK-ORIENTED

Describe a situation in which you were unable to complete the tasks that were assigned due to circumstances beyond your control. How did you react?

Give me an example of a recent work situation in which you faced difficulties that required you to push your professional boundaries.

INTEGRATION TIPS

Successful integration into a new position requires an adaptation of the candidate to his new work environment. This adaptation includes three main issues:

- Learning the role and task
- The creation of a social network
- Adapting to the culture and values of the team and the organization

An employee who manages to adapt to these three major issues will have better chances to have a successful integration. Generally, well-integrated employees are happier at work, more productive, and have less intention of changing jobs. The indices presented in this section provide a glimpse of the style of integration of the candidate according to his personality. These indices aim to equip the manager in the integration of the candidate, and should not be considered as a selection tool.

LEARNING STYLE

The interaction between the Openness trait and the Conscientiousness trait provides information on how one will approach learning

Pragmatic Learner

Pragmatic approach to learning. Knowledge is a means to an end and not an end in itself. Does what it takes to acquire the knowledge necessary to achieve a goal (training, professional, etc.). Approaches knowledge with conformism, little inclined to have a critical perspective of what is taught.

Disengaged

Not focused on learning and studying. Little at ease in an academic context. Knowledge and deep understanding of things are of little interest to him. Constraining himself in the required learning efforts is hard. More comfortable in a short and practical training leading to practical applications (e.g. vocational training).

Good learner

The intellectual interest and creativity of the openness trait with the willingness to succeed and the organization of the conscientiousness trait produces the typical profile of a good learner. Interested in learning and taking the means to reach the end of his interests. Ability to take a critical step back from what is being taught. High probability of success in training.

Inconsistent learner

Diversified intellectual and/or creative interests, diversified but at risk of not being deepened by lack of determination and organization. Learning may stop while the effort to pursue it increases, which can lead to the acquisition of great superficial knowledge without deepening.

INTERPERSONAL STYLE

The interaction between the agreeableness and extroversion gives information about the interpersonal style, meaning the way the person will take on his relationship with others.

Modest

Is not attracted to social situations and new encounters, but does not reflect a lack of interest towards others. Will prefer to maintain a small number of significant interpersonal relationships. Modest and discreet in a group.

Individualistic

Independent and individualistic. Little interested in social relations. Feels easily disturbed by the presence of others. Protects his personal sphere and privacy. May reflect a distrust towards others. Can be perceived as cold, distant and uncooperative.

Warm Leader

Actively seeking to create and maintain personal relationships with people. Sincerely makes friends with people. Brings life to a group and is often in a position of leadership and or initiator of common activities. A warm and collaborative leader. Likes teamwork.

Self-centered Leader

Actively seeks social relationships for the benefits and the pleasure that it gives him rather than by interest towards others. Tendency to create many superficial and utilitarian relationships. Likes being at the forefront. Can become an authoritarian leader and little inclined to listen to his subordinates.

INTEREST STYLE

The interaction between openness and extroversion provides information about the interests that person may have, both professionally and personally.

Popular Culture

Interest in activities in which social contacts are frequent, which require influencing others and in which it is possible to succeed by keeping to the usual ways of doing things. Would prefer continuity and consolidation to change and innovation.

Homebody

Introverted and concrete person whose simple interests can be pursued alone and in small groups. Prefers a quiet social and creative life. Preference for working with data rather than with ideas and with things rather than with people (ex: Accounting, mechanics and repair, construction trades).

Creative Interaction

His interests combine gregariousness, upward mobility, creativity and intellectual curiosity. Wants to share his knowledge and creativity. Creative and innovative leader. Interested in understanding and influencing people and society. Interested in sharing ideas and creativity with other people and influencing them (ex.: teacher, politician, manager).

Introspection

Concerned primarily by intellectual or artistic activities which can be pursued individually or in small groups (ex: literature, music). Will be more interested in working with ideas rather than with data and with things rather than people (ex: scientific research, artistic creation).
